WINNER IT ALL BEGAN Noy's journey on the highest office of the land started at the Manila airport terminal, Aug. 31, 1993

First order of business: List down all problems

By Gil C. Cabacungan Jr.

IN HIS OWN WORDS, PRESIDENT-ELECT Benigno Sison "Ninoy" Aquino III is not looking "total yay" and is "a little nervous, a little eager to start solving the problems of the country."

Speaking yesterday at his first press conference only minutes after being proclaimed winner of the presidential election, Aquino was casual and candid, serious and down-to-earth, unpolished but polite. And as though he wouldn't be called "P. Noy" and not by his initials BSA.

Aquino has often said that he had a vision of his own, and at the press conference, he showed little interest in being puffed with questions he had already answered, as well as being told what to do. "I am sorry I am not a politician that has to repeat his statements already I hope you understood," he said a reporter from the Japanese news station NHK, who insisted that she wanted to hear from his mouth, not in English, what he had already said about his policies in his first 300 days.

Noy: Bangit not my AFP chief; Verzosa to stay head of PNP

By Gil C. Cabacungan Jr., Jocelyn R. Uy and Christian V. Eguerra

GEN. DELFIN BANGIT WILL NOT BE THE Armed Forces' chief of staff under his administration, President-elect Benigno "Ninoy" Aquino III announced yesterday.

Aquino refused to waver on the well-known and controversial call for Bangit, who was named AFP chief of staff by President Marcos, to step down two days before the constitutional ban on appointments, would have to go because he intended to put his own stamp in the military's highest post.

Aquino said Bangit's "commitment and loyalty" did not indicate "a harmonious relationship with us."

In contrast, Bangit's counterpart in the Philippine National Police, Director General Jose Verzosa, may be retained. (See related story on this page.)

"I'll probably retain him," Aquino said yesterday during his first press conference after his proclamation.

He said that except for Bangit, 94, all

Binay won't be spare tire, eyes DILG

By Norman Bordado

MOMENTS AFTER HIS PROCLAMATION as the country's next vice president, Jejomar Binay announced his resolve—he wouldn't be anybody's spare tire.

The Vice President-elect again made public his desire to head the Department of Interior and Local Government (DILG), which Binay said was within his core competency.

The outgoing mayor of the country's wealthiest city for more than 20 years, Binay made it clear that he would be a working Vice President instead of one who'd just stand idly by until the president is unable to perform his duties.

"I will not be that Vice President, the one they call a spare tire. That will never happen," Binay told reporters who gathered around him while President-elect Benigno Aquino III held court in a news conference earlier today.

Over the course of the campaign period and even after the May 10 elections, Binay repeatedly expressed his desire to be appointed

THE TORCH WAS PASSED TO clamorous cheers in a blaze of yellow as Congress yesterday proclaimed Sen. Benigno Aquino III the country's next president and Makati Mayor Jejomar Binay vice president.

It brought a festive end to eight days of uncertainties surrounding following the country's first nationwide national elections. Wild applause and loud cheering filled the session hall of the Bantayan Pangasinan in Quezon City as Senate President Juan Ponce Enrile and Speaker Prospero Nograles raised the hands of the country's new leaders.

Aquino was declared winner at exactly 4 p.m., paving the way for a peaceful transition of power as President Binay-Arroyo is set to step down on June 30 after nine years in office. Binay was proclaimed at 2:56 p.m.

The winners' families joined them at the podium, but Aquino's girlfriend, the last Solidbank nominee named in the VP gallery.

As President-elect Binay, seated in a popular uprising in 2001 and later convicted and imprisoned in 2007 on plunder charges only to be pardoned weeks later, accepted his political debut.

"I join our people in extending unequalled support to the new President with both hope and prayers he will serve our country faithfully and will perform his duties honorably without fear or favor," Enrile said in a statement read by his son Senate President Pro Tempore Jinggoy Enrile. (See story on Page A2.)

No objections were heard at the joint session as the floor leaders moved for the proclamation, and the affirmation readings over the Aquino and Binay supporters in a frenzy of chanting.

Binay's supporters were more vocal, loudly chanting "Binay, Binay" at every chance they got.

The side of the gallery filled with Aquino's supporters, who formed a sea of bright yellow, also chanted "Ninoy" and "Aquino" at various intervals, but their cheers were sometimes drowned out by

Norway joins int'l peace monitors

By Jeffrey Matulis

OSLO, NORWAY (AP)—NORWAY WILL BE JOINING the International Monitoring Team (IMT) that will oversee the peace process in east Timor, marking official statehood for the island nation. The IMT, which also includes Brazil, Japan and France, is tasked to monitor a ceasefire and the protection of civilians. It also helps restore socio-economic recovery programs in conflict areas.

"This is a welcome development. Although we still have an idea how many lives are going to end," he said.

Money sent among those involved to restore the progress of national peace negotiations between the government and the IMT, which has been fighting for over 40 years to establish an independent state. At the end of the Norwegian Ambassador to the Philippines, Jose Salas, who welcomed the acceptance of the mission through a letter addressed to the government and to the peace negotiators.

Norway also selected some talks between the government and the resistance the civil (Democratic Front).

Backed by the Organization of the Islamic Conference (OIC), the IMT was first deployed in 2001 to oversee a ceasefire between the warring forces in Timor. Talks for a final peace agreement with the IMT, however, collapsed in 2006 after the Japanese Coast Guard that a provision in the agreement marking the boundaries of a new Indonesian territory was not accepted. A new round of talks began in 2006, but the European Commission delegation in the Philippines, led by Wimley, said the European Union was looking forward to a "standard final agreement which would be acceptable and long lasting."

Heroes and heroines in the Armed Forces

On the occasion of December 12th, 1983, the anniversary of our nation's birth, I am proud to have a message for you, fellow soldiers, the brave and heroic who are valiantly fighting for our nation's independence from oppression.

I thank those men and women of the Armed Forces of the Philippines, who continue to fight for peace, freedom and democracy in our nation.

Our soldiers are the ones who continue to protect our nation, to keep our nation free from those who desire to oppress and oppress them. They continue to protect and defend the Philippines from the might of oppression—the oppressors of the people and the oppressors who are seeking destruction and seeking harm among our people and to our country.

On so, we are thankful that we have in our side the AFR always ready to cheer and promote us, the defense. Moreover, let us be thankful that they continue to promote the peace and stability of our nation. Lastly, let us be thankful that our armed forces come in light for the nation's freedom and prosper democracy.

A mission to teach art to poor kids

ARTTEACH teacher Ron Peralta (left) shows artworks of the first 120 scholars of Project 1000 in Silang, Cavite. A student's self-portrait on canvas fabric is seen on the right.

Silang, Cavite

ART TEACHER RON PERALTA is counting 883 more to fulfill a mission.

His mission began last year when he first 120 students launched their exhibit on Monday at a fundraising activity of the center on the same day. The exhibit, the first of its kind, was held at the school.

"We also still have many more to go," Peralta said. "I want to see the children in the school and the children in the community."

The school started in 2005 as a free art class for children from depressed villages in Silang.

Peralta's family, whose members are all in the community of the Christian Church, has been teaching art to the children since they were in their home on weekends. Helping him in the teaching process is his brother, Wilfredo, 18, and daughter, Gersona, 10.

In October last year, Peralta started accepting art classes for the Project 1000 Scholars, which consists of a formal art painting lesson at a low cost.

"I wanted to expand my reach by creating a more children who appreciate art, who are willing to support their kids' dreams, and are willing to support their kids' dreams."

Scholars

Registration for the first painting session was 720, while 7200 is required for the art class. The school's self-portrait on the canvas fabric was on the wall.

"We are not just teaching kids to paint, but we are also teaching them to be artists," Peralta said. "We are not just teaching them to be artists, but we are also teaching them to be artists."

"In such, classes on self-portrait painting, usually cost P2,000. The school also has to provide for his or her own materials," the principal.

Started in 2001, Artreach offers classes to children in poor villages in Silang town in Cavite.

The first session includes activities on painting subjects, such as trees, flowers, landscape of the 2nd volume in the school city of Tagaytay, Laguna and Silang.

The current class is the same as the first, but it is more focused on the children's own experiences.

"I encourage the parents to buy the materials of their own children. After all, what is the purpose of the school then?" said Peralta.

She also hoped to see her own painting of a Silang kid in every home here, "that will promote the school's mission to the neighboring cities of Tagaytay and Imus."

Leveling up

Joselyn Salazar, 18, said she had been painting for 1000 scholars on the Internet and she is now in the school to apply for the program.

"My parents can always support me if I want to do this class. I learned to paint from my parents, and I want to be an artist."

Asked why she wanted to be an artist, she said, "I want to be an artist because I want to be an artist. I want to be an artist because I want to be an artist. I want to be an artist because I want to be an artist."

Shape up or ship out, Rosales warns Metro cops

By Mike Masada

THREE STRIKES AND YOU'RE OUT

Director Pedro in Manila, National Capital Region Police Office (NCRO) chief, said yesterday he had recommended to Philippine National Police chief, Director General Juan Uy, the dismissal of Metro policemen who fail to pass the biometric physical fitness test (PFT) three times in a row.

"The concerned policemen must either improve his physical health and pass the test or take responsibility to himself and to the organization or the NCRO will initiate PFT removal from the service through the anti-corruption," Rosales said in a statement.

The NCRO chief explained that those who finish the PFT the first time would undergo an intensive physical fitness program to develop their stamina and enable them to pass succeeding tests—a requirement for all uniformed personnel.

Rosales said the training program would be conducted at the NCRO headquarters in Camp Baguio Drive, Taguig City under the supervision of officers of the plans and training and legal services divisions.

Should those policemen fail to pass the PFT a second time, they will undergo an entire retraining program. Should they still fail to pass the required fitness test a third time, they will be subjected to dismissal proceedings, he added.

Lim to MPD: Probe attack on radioman

By The G. Santos

MANILA (INQUIRER) — Metro Police Director Lim yesterday ordered the police to conduct a probe into a radio-transmitter's complaint that two men used to kill him in front of his house in Yonkers on Thursday night.

Lim gave Supt. Alex Geronimo, head of the Manila Police District's detective unit, a week to determine the people involved in the attack on Juan Baldo, 46, a communications officer of Metro Police.

Based on his complaint to the police, Baldo, a resident of Tomas de Noy Street in Yonkers, said he was once tried to kill him at around 10:45 p.m. on Thursday.

According to him, he had just gotten home and was about to park his car when he spotted a man sitting suspiciously nearby.

Santos said that after he alighted from his vehicle, he noticed two other men following him, prompting him to walk faster toward the guard of his house.

However, a fourth man who was armed with a rifle, all joined suddenly against him and pulled him to the side with the gun.

Baldo, who said he knew none of the four men, was told he would be killed. He tried to scream but the men told him they would not do that.

The men then, however, caught the attention of his neighbors, a policeman, who immediately rushed to his aid.

As for the police, the men managed to escape through the back door of the house. Baldo said the policemen who managed to shoot at him.

US, Russia, France dismiss Iran deal Tehran faces tougher UN sanctions

VIENNA—THE UNITED STATES, Russia and France have replied to a proposal by Iran to swap some of its enriched uranium for reactor fuel, effectively dismantling the idea known before an expected UN Security Council vote on Wednesday on new sanctions against Iran, diplomats said.

Three diplomats familiar with the replies say they contain a series of questions that is often called a "red line" on the issue.

The United States, Russia and France have said the swap proposal suggested by Iran and Turkey would leave Iran with enough material to make nuclear weapons. And they said that Iran needs to increase a new program of work to increase its nuclear level.

The diplomats spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because their information was confidential.

US Secretary of State Hillary Clinton said on Tuesday that the proposed Iran UN Security Council veto would require progress the swap program, leaving arguments in Iran's capital that there is strong support for a broad resolution pending Iran for to allow it to prove its nuclear program is peaceful and ending international demands to halt nuclear enrichment.

"I think it is fair to say that there are the most significant questions that Iran has to answer," Clinton said at a news conference with French President Nicolas Sarkozy. "The answer of the international community is very significant."

She declined to predict the outcome of the vote in the 15-member Security Council, but

UN Defense Secretary Robert Gates in London said the sanctions would pass and pave the way for tougher additional measures by the United States and its allies.

"The strategy here is a combination of diplomacy and pressure to persuade the Iranians that they are headed in the wrong direction in terms of their own security that they will abandon their security by pursuit of nuclear weapons, not enhance it," Gates said.

In the final version of the UN resolution, which was submitted to the Security Council by the United States, sanctions would be tougher than previous proposals but will be short of crippling economic punishments as envisioned by the U.S.

The sanctions would have been punishing "any activity related to ballistic missiles capable of delivering nuclear weapons," but Iranian instruments in activities such as uranium mining and enrichment have been being several categories of heavy weapons including ballistic missiles and missiles.

Sanctions in the resolution, which were agreed upon on Tuesday, would target 40 new Iranian companies or organizations, including 10 linked to Iran's powerful Revolutionary Guard.

One person was added to the previous list of 30 Iranian entities to be under threat, Javad Rahimi, who heads the Atomic Energy Organization of Iran's Nuclear Science and Technology Center.

The sanctions list also includes 22 companies or organizations involved in nuclear or ballistic missile activities and three entities linked to the Islamic Republic of Iran Shipping Lines. If the resolution is approved, the number of entities under sanctions would more than double from 70 at present to 92.

STOCK MARKET

Stocks down as Eurozone worries

SHARE PRICES COULDN'T rebound as the local bourse joined the downward swing in Asian equities, following earnings by a credit-rating firm about the fiscal health of European economies.

The benchmark PSE ended the trading session at 3,264.82, declining by 15.42 points or 0.46 percent.

Traders pointed to news overnight that Irish Ratings lowered its outlook for the British economy—Europe's largest—and Japan—as the main reason for the stock-market slide.

"It seems that investors are in the blue of the day," said an observer from a local brokerage firm. "The market is nervous in policy."

All sectors were volatile and declined, except for the mining and services, which posted a 1.1 percent gain.

The 40 shares listed, which represent the aggregate movement of all listed issues in the local bourse, dropped 7.44 points or 0.36 percent to 2,376.90.

Local stock fell most notably to PSE, which ended PSE at 2.38. Blue chips like PSE Holdings, GSI Investments and Government Bonds also saw their prices decline.

PSE's trading volume was relatively healthy, with a total of 1.1 billion shares changing hands for P3.2 billion.

Thirty-five stocks advanced. Selected while 71 remained unchanged. Rod G. Marcelo

Titans offer to build new airport terminal

By Corrie S. Martinez

TWO OF THE COUNTRY'S BIGGEST CORPORATE titans—each in almost every field they do business in—have agreed to join forces to build the Philippines' next international aviation hub some 70 kilometers north of Metro Manila.

The move has earned that Ang and Pongloss have "discussed" the broad details of the issue and "have come to an agreement" as long as it is presented with them in a proposal to the government to "jointly develop" a multi-billion peso passenger terminal for the New Clark International Airport in Clark, Pampanga.

The deal would also mark the development of NCI, which has been in the air and starts, ever since it was designated by the government as the replacement for the aging and overused Ninoy Aquino International Airport in Pasay City.

Internationally, however, it could also signal a dramatic shift by the local corporate sector, which has been reluctant to compete in recent years because Ang and Pongloss have maintained a conservative stance in their various take-all fields.

Internationally, however, it could also signal a dramatic shift by the local corporate sector, which has been reluctant to compete in recent years because Ang and Pongloss have maintained a conservative stance in their various take-all fields.

RP rice imports to hit 2.5M tons

By Rod T. Ochoa

THIS WILL bring the total volume of Philippine rice imports this year to 2.45 million tons, less the one for imports of 2.47 million tons, according to NFA officials.

The volume exceeds the 2.4 million tons imported in 2009, when the price of the commodity reached an all-time high of $1,000 a ton. The Philippines brought in 1.77 million tons of rice in 2009.

In November and December last year, the Philippines imported 2.05 million tons of white rice from abroad for 2010 supply (domestic rising prices forced the NFA to buy only 1.62 million tons for delivery until June this year).

The NFA usually imports rice from abroad for 2010 supply (domestic rising prices forced the NFA to buy only 1.62 million tons for delivery until June this year).

The NFA, an attached agency of the Department of Trade and Industry, the authority to facilitate rice importation is the NFA.

S&P sees minimal impact of Euro crisis on RP

By Rod T. Ochoa

STANDARD & POOR'S HAS expressed confidence that the Philippines would remain relatively unaffected by the growing economic recession in the euro zone, citing the country's relatively strong foreign exchange reserves.

The outlook of S&P was consistent with views of the country's monetary officials, who said the rising gross international reserves (GIR) would help sustain investment that the Philippines would want to do to cope with the global economy.

Monetary officials also said the country's foreign exchange holdings would allow the Philippines to prevent a possible foreign debt crisis, by selling some of the dollar—that could arise from the flight of capital to risk-averse foreign investors.

In its latest commentary on the potential impact of the economic problems in Asia, S&P said the more than $15 billion in investments being sent to the Philippines each year would help sustain growth of the country's GDP.
